Danville Social News

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Danville, Va., April 15.—Main Street Methodist Church was the scene of a brilliant wedding Tuesday evening, last at 9 o'clock, when Miss India Mabel Robinson, daughter of Dr. W. L. Robinson, became the bride of James T. Catlin, Jr. The church was filled with a representative gathering of persons prominent in Virginia and North Carolina. The color tone of green and white prevailed at the church. The chancel was banked with palms and ferns and the chancel rail was draped in smilax. Clusters of Easter lilies added fragrance to the occasion.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the Burton, to which several hundred were invited. Here pink and green were used in the decorations, and both the public and private parlors were banked with pink carnations and palms. Mrs. L. F. de Bordenave, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Julian Robinson, wearing exquisite evening gowns, received in the handsomely decorated reception hall and introduced the guests to Mr. and Mrs. Catlin, who received, assisted by Dr. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Catlin, Sr., and the bride party in the front parlor. Mrs. R. A. Walters, in white messaline, ushered the guests into the private parlor, where a delicious punch was served from a prettily decorated table, by Mrs. W. W. Williamson. Mrs. Rucker Penn and Mrs. Joseph E. Taylor, of "Woodland", Mrs. James Penn, in lavender chiffon, hand-embroidered over messaline, and Mrs. John Robinson, in black, showed the guests into the private dining-room. Mrs. Turner Ashby Weller, in white messaline, presided over the bride's table. The private dining-room was handsomely decorated in pink and green. The windows were banded with palms, ferns, cut-flowers and cut-glass candlesticks contained pink candles, under silver filigree.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. L. F. de Bordenave, Miss Kate Jones, of Richmond; Mrs. W. G. Catlin, of Asheville, N. C.; Miss Bessie Withers, of Raleigh, N. C.; Miss Laura Pillars, of Mobile, Ala.; James Schofield, of Richmond; W. L. Robinson, Miss Rebecca Courtney, of Richmond; Mrs. Thomas Robinson, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin G.
